

SUGGEST WAY TO DISPATCH MAIL AFTER 4:45 P. M.

Local Businessmen Propose Use of Bus Or Truck Service.

FEWER TRAINS CAUSE DELAY

A movement is under way in Gettysburg to secure a new mail dispatch listing out of here some time after five o'clock in the afternoon. It was learned from an authoritative source today.

Since August 5 Gettysburg has been without a late dispatch of outgoing mail and business and industrial leaders have been complaining of the delay caused by the discontinuance of two Western Maryland mail and passenger trains.

It was pointed out that receipt of mail has not been changed here through the discontinuance of the train service, but that outgoing mail, if not in the local post office before four o'clock in the afternoon is sometimes delayed one day.

It is now proposed to have a bus or mail truck service out of Gettysburg about six o'clock in the evening, daily, except Sunday, so that outgoing mail, usually deposited after the closing of offices and industrial plants could be delivered at nearby points the next day.

Under the present setup a bus arrives here at 7:30 o'clock in the morning from Blue Ridge Summit. A mail train on the Reading line arrives at 9:30 o'clock and the Western Maryland mail train arrives at 10:40 a. m. Another mail is received here from Carlisle, on a star route, at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Outgoing mail leaves on the Reading at 12:30 o'clock p. m.; the Western Maryland at 4:15; a star route to Carlisle at 4:40 and a star route to Blue Ridge Summit at 4:45 p. m. The latter makes connections with the Baltimore and Ohio railroad to Hagerstown.

The new plan, if approved by Washington postal officials, will give Gettysburgians an opportunity to have mail sent out of here about six o'clock in the evening, assuring delivery at nearby destinations the following day.

Candy 'King' in Comeback at 81

A comeback that practically outdoes a Horatio Alger story was effected by James M. Washburne at the age of 81. He lost a fortune during the depression and was forced to peddle candy on New York streets for a living. Then he got the idea of making candy from vegetables. Now he has been named president of a candy corporation capitalized at a million dollars. He is shown with his wife in the kitchen of their home—and appropriately making candy. CORN, PEACHES ATTRACT BUYERS

Townpeople Jam Farmers' Market Today; Eggs Sell At 30 Cents a Dozen.

The Farmers' market was jammed to capacity with hucksters and buyers for the regular Saturday sale of Adams county farm produce and some of the hucksters, who arrived late or had not reserved space, were forced to display their produce and transact business out of doors.

Corn and peaches reigned "supreme" with practically every huckster showing a variety of produce to entice local buyers.

Eggs skyrocketed from 27 cents a dozen last week to 30 cents today. Other prices include: Lima beans, 35 cents a quart; beets, 5 cents a bunch; carrots and tomatoes, 5 cents a bunch and box; apples, 5 to 20 cents a box depending upon the variety and the size of the box; peaches, 10 cents a small box; blackberries, 10 cents a box or three for 25 cents; string beans were bringing 15 cents a quarter peck.

There were large and small chickens, dressed and live. They were selling from 40 to 60 cents each; corn on the cob was bringing 25 cents a dozen, an increase of 5 cents over prices in effect a week ago. Huckleberries were 15 cents a box or two boxes for 25 cents. Potatoes were one dollar a bushel and plums were 10 cents a box.

There was an abundance of other farm produce and many hucksters were showing large bouquets of garden flowers.

At the borough market in the Legion building there were seven hucksters doing business with slim patronage.

PENSION FUND DROP STOPS AID TO 11 FAMILIES

State Allotment Permits Care of 13 Instead Of 24.

$12.88 MONTHLY FOR TWO YEARS

Eleven Adams county families who have been receiving monthly allotments from the Mothers' Assistance Pension fund will be stricken from the rolls because the state has reduced the appropriation to the local fund, Miss Margaret McMillan, secretary, announced today.

Twenty-four families in the county have been on the Mothers' Assistance Pension fund rolls for several years. Each month they have been receiving monthly checks, half of which is appropriated by the state and the other half by the Adams county commissioners.

During a two-year period which ended May 31, the local board distributed $7,163, less ten per cent which was used for administration purposes. Half of the $7,163 was appropriated by the state and the county commissioners appropriated a like amount.

Each Family Gets $12.88

For the next two years, June 1, of this year to June 1, 1937, the state appropriated $2,233.80. The Adams county commissioners, according to law, appropriated a like sum making the total amount available to the Mothers' Assistance Pension fund in Adams county, $4,467.60, or $2,695.40 less than the previous two-year allotment.

Of this amount $446.70 will be used for administration purposes, leaving a balance of $4,020.90 to be distributed to needy mothers and their families.

The $4,020.90 will be distributed among 13 families over a two-year period. Each family is paid by check each month. This will mean that each family, of the thirteen remaining on the rolls, will receive a monthly check of $12.88.

If the allotment for the next two years were divided among the twenty-four families—the number of families on the rolls during the last two years—each family would receive a monthly allotment of $6.98. It is not known how the board judged the families to remain on the rolls and those to be stricken.

Shooting Stars to Fill Sky During Next Three Nights

GETTYSBURGIANS and Adams countians, by looking to the north tonight, Sunday and Monday nights after midnight may expect to see sparks fly when old "Mother Earth," rambling along its orbit at nineteen miles a second, goes through a cloud of celestial dust.

The Associated Press gives the following information concerning the sparks and their causes:

This cosmic cloud, an oval ring whose long diameter is several billion miles, is whirling at some fifty miles a second.

The result of the contact will be celestial sparks. It is the richest annual display of "showers of shooting stars," the perseid meteors.

These are swift streaks of golden fire. Persons who stay up after the setting of the moon, that's after midnight, may expect to see sixty or seventy meteors an hour. Tonight, Sunday and Monday nights are expected to be the best shows this year.

Look to the north for them. They come from the direction of the constellation of Perseus. Hence astronomers call them perseids.

Some call them the "stars of St. Lawrence." That's because "there was a brilliant display on the night of August 10, 258 A. D. On that day the minions of the Roman Emperor Valerian roasted on a gridiron the Christian deacon, Lawrence. He had been proclaimed martyr and made saint. His followers pointed to the meteors as his "tears of compassion."

Astronomers say that each of these "shooting stars" is but a grain of cosmic dust. It explodes and burns up with a temperature of 600,000 degrees caused by friction of striking the earth's atmosphere at terrific speed.

When the perseids shoot into the atmosphere about eighty miles above the earth they burst into flames and look like shooting stars.

Fayetteville, N. C., Aug. 10 (AP)—J. Ross Jones, chief of police here for the last 13 years and a world war veteran, died in a hospital this morning several hours after suffering a mysterious bullet wound in a hotel room. He was a native of Gettysburg.

The room door was unlocked. The chief's revolver laid beside him on the bed and his watch and a wallet, containing more than $40 were on the dresser. The bullet had entered one temple, emerged through the other and lodged in the mattress.

Authorities were notified and an inquest was ordered immediately. Among the survivors is his mother who lives in Lexington, North Carolina.

The late William T. Jones, father of J. Ross Jones, mentioned in the above Associated Press dispatch, was engineer at the Lutheran Theological seminary several years.

4 MORE AUTOS SCRAPE SIDES

Drivers of Two Cars to Face Informations After Side-swiping Crashes Friday.

Two more sideswiping accidents were recorded in the annals of auto-mobiling in Adams county Friday night and two drivers are to face charges for violation of the motor code.

Mrs. Ruth E. Weisendale, 20, of McSherrystown, driving a roadster, was enroute to Hanover. Morris J. Roser, 54, of Hanover, was en route to McSherrystown.

As the two cars approached they sideswiped and Mrs. Weisendale's machine crashed into the parked car of A. G. W. Forry, of Hanover. The stories of an eye-witness and the two operators failed to agree on the cause of the mishap. Marks on the highway led Patrolman G. H. Harleman, of the local sub-station of highway patrol, to blame Mrs. Weisendale who admitted that she had been drinking, according to the officer.

An information will be laid against Mrs. Weisendale charging her with reckless driving. Damage to the three machines is estimated at about $100.

Two Front Wheels Broken

Robert Storm, 22, of McSherrystown, was driving a sedan toward New Oxford and Miss M. Obel Bortner, 32, of Taneytown R. 1, was driving toward McSherrystown, on the New Oxford-McSherrystown road, about 10 o'clock Friday night.

As the cars approached they sideswiped.

Storm said he was on his right side of the road and Miss Bortner told Patrolman G. H. Harleman, who investigated, that she was on her right side of the road.

Marks on the highway were said by the patrolman to indicate that Miss Bortner had driven to her extreme right to allow Storm to pass and that Storm had not yielded his portion of the road.

Miss Bortner's car was off the road, the two right wheels being a foot off the highway, the officer said, while Storm's car was in the center of the road, with the two front wheels broken.

An information will be laid against Storm charging him with failing to yield the right of way to highway traffic.

Jury Recommends Suspension of Mrs. Earl Culp's License.

INQUEST HELD IN COURT HOUSE

"Harry W. Culp, prominent Gettysburg barber, died of injuries received in an automobile accident on the morning of July 31; that Mrs. Pauline Culp, wife of Earl Culp, Hanover, was operating the vehicle which crashed into a parked car on York street, at an excessive rate of speed and in a reckless manner, and that we recommend to the Pennsylvania motor vehicle department that the operator's license of Mrs. Pauline Culp be indefinitely suspended."

This was the verdict of a cornerer's jury which convened Friday afternoon in the arbitration room of the court house and heard testimony given before Dr. Edgar A. Miller, Adams county coroner.

Earl Culp, brother of the deceased and husband of the operator of the car, was the first to testify. He declared that his wife was a competent driver; that with his wife and Mrs. Henry Kohsin, of Lancaster, he came to Gettysburg about 9:30 p. m., Tuesday, July 30, and visited at the Harry W. Culp home; that about 9:45 p. m. they, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Culp, drove to the Rainbow Inn, operated by Gordon Signor on the Lincoln highway east, to attend a square dance; that his wife drank not more than two glasses of beer, and that they started for Gettysburg about 1:30 p. m.

Fast, Reckless

(Continued from Page One) same time that his wife did, and that he reached for the emergency brake as his wife swerved the car to the left. He said he did not remember anything further. He testified he lost his glasses and did not recognize anyone at the scene of the crash. He said the car was being operated at a speed of between 35 and 40 miles an hour.

Mrs. Henry Kohsin's testimony was similar. She said the road was not wet but that the night was dark. She said she did not see the parked car and did not know how the accident happened.

Clair God testified that he met the five occupants of the car at Signor's place and that they agreed to drive him home when he was unable to start his car. He said he arrived at the inn about 12:30 o'clock and remained there until the Culp party left.

He testified that he did not see the parked car and that when the cars crashed his head struck the back of the front seat and that he was dazed. He said he left the scene of the accident because he was dazed and walked to his residence. He said he learned later in the morning of the death of Harry W. Culp.

None of the witnesses was able to testify that they saw the late Harry W. Culp thrown or get out of the car. They all said the accident happened so quickly that they did not know how he got out of the car.

Garageman Testifies

Arthur Phiel, York street garageman, who lives near the scene of the accident, said he heard the noise of the crash and arrived at the scene about two minutes later. He said the two cars were about 133 feet from where the crash occurred and that the car that was crashed was on fire. He said Mrs. Harry Culp was looking for her husband. He further testified that Mrs. Earl Culp backed her car from the debris and that when she attempted to get into the car and drive to the hospital he removed the car key to prevent her from driving. He said he could not testify that Mrs. Earl Culp was under the influence of liquor but, he said, "I smelled something."

Upon cross examination by Attorney Harvey Gros, of York, representing Mrs. Earl Culp, Phiel testified that the reason he took the automobile key from her car was "because the car was not in condition to be driven."

Mrs. Harry W. Culp testified in effect to about the same details as given by other witnesses. At the close of all testimony she told Corcoran Miller, upon questioning, that she felt that "it was an accident and I do not hold any grievance against anyone."

Herbert Allen, manager of the American store, Carlisle street, who resides near the scene of the crash, testified to hearing the noise and to seeing the two cars together, one afire. He said he did not see the parked car when he returned to his home about 6 o'clock the evening before. He said the crash took place about 135 feet from where he saw the two machines after the accident. He said he took Mrs. Earl Culp to the hospital in his machine.

Driver Of Car Takes Stand

Officer George B. Aughinbaugh, right officer on duty at the time of the mishap, said that he was notified of the accident by his daughter, who called from his home. He said he drove from the center square to the scene and that all occupants had left. He said he measured the distance from where his son's car was parked to where the cars stopped and that it was 133 feet.

Officer Aughinbaugh testified that Mrs. Earl Culp gave him her name, operator's card, license and other information at the Warner hospital. He said that Mrs. Earl Culp did not appear to be under the influence of liquor, but that he "smelled something, beer or liquor."

Mrs. Earl Culp waived her constitutional right and took the stand. She told of her trip here from Eanover, thence to the H. W. Culp residence and from there to Signor's. She testified that she had "one or two and possibly three, not more, glasses of beer," at Signor's. She said she danced most of the evening.

She said she did not drive more than 45 miles an hour coming into town and that she slowed down at the intersection of the road leading to the Oyler and Spangler fertilizer plant. She said she was driving about 35 or 40 miles an hour at the time of the accident.

Mrs. Culp further testified that she did not see the car until it was too late to avoid the crash and that she does not remember anything further except that she backed her car from the crash debris and parked it and that someone took her to the hospital.

The jury comprised John L. Shoop, Charles R. Zhea, Frank B. Stonaker, Charles M. Wills, Harry A. Sheely and Abner S. Mills.

MONEY CAUSES TRIANGLE KILLING

Money, just beyond her reach, caused Mrs. Marguerite F. Dolbow to plot with Norman Driscoll (both shown above) the slaying of her husband, according to New Jersey authorities. Mrs. Dolbow's mother withheld access to $140,000 because the 28-year-old school teacher married Dolbow, a poor farmer, according to the case the authorities have built. (Associated Press Photos)

READY MADE WIFE

BY CORALIE STANTON

SYNOPSIS: Laurie has forgotten the complications of her own life in her fear for her sister, who has gone to Paris from London on a jaunt with Jimmy Dallas. Laurie does not trust Jimmy, so she begs Rex Moore, the famous aviator, to fly her to Paris. He does; he is in love with Laurie, and Laurie with him, yet each is engaged to another. She has left Rex and is going to Dallas' hotel.

Chapter 45

LOST GIRL

There was a certain number of tourists walking back to their hotels in the hot July night, after supper. But mostly people on the street were Parisians of the middle and working classes, children of these beautiful streets, who play out their life stories, drama, comedy and tragedy, on these beloved paving stones.

Laurie had only walked a few steps when she saw a lighted sign over the portico of one of the buildings.

She went in, and passed the liveried porter, making her way to the reception office at one side of the luxurious vestibule.

"I want to see Mr. James Dallas of London," she said to a clerk. She had no eyes for the splendid and tasteful decoration of the place, the damask hangings, the gilding, the banks of flowers. She did not hear the soft enticing sounds of a string orchestra in the distance. She was here, at her goal.

"Yes, Madame," the clerk said. He consulted a large board at the back of the office. "Monsieur James Dallas—of London. I will find out if he is in his room. What name, if you please, Madame?"

"Mrs. Moore," said Laurie boldly. The clerk went into an inner office, and returned in a few moments. "Monsieur Dallas is in his suite, Madame, and will be pleased if you will go upstairs."

Laurie was amazed. She had not expected such an easy entrance. For a moment she experienced intense relief. Things must be all right. She had been prepared to batter in his door, to call in the police, if necessary.

She was taken up, and the door of a large sitting-room was opened for her. It was full of flowers, but smelt of food and wine fumes and tobacco. There were dessert dishes and champagne bottles, coffee cups and liqueur decanters spread on the cloth in confusion.

Jimmy had obviously had too much to drink, and he was alone.

Jimmy Dallas looked at Laurie with foolish eyes. He leaned back in his gilded, rose-brocaded armchair, and a fatuous smile came over his face.

"So you've come back, you little fool!" he said. His voice was thick and a trifle out of control, but it still had the infection which conquered many more girls than poor Gladys, like the piping of Pan in a dark wood at mid-day. "I know you'd come back," he went on. "As if you could run away from me when we'd just started on our good time!"

"What are you talking about, Mr. Dallas?" asked Laurie sternly. "Where is Gladys, my sister?"

"Oh! He rose unsteadily, and, leaning across the table, stared at her, blinking. "Good Lord, it's you! They rang up and said 'a lady.' So I thought the little idiot had thought better of it and come back."

"Where is Gladys?" Laurie repeated. "I am Mrs. Moore, her sister."

"So you are! I see it now. The little school marm who's not nearly so quiet as she seems! A clever little piece you must be, too, from all accounts! You came to my place, didn't you—the other day?"

"I came to tell you to leave my sister alone. And now you've persuaded her to come to Paris with you. You've tricked her into this madness. Where is she?"

He poured out a glass of neat brandy and drank it down. It had, curiously enough, an almost immediate sobering effect on him. There was a white tinge about his mouth, though. An ugly, vindictive look had come into his greenish-brown eyes.

"You must know where she is, Mr. Dallas. I know she came to Paris with you. Her friend in Streatham gave me this address. She knew about it."

"Dirty little beast! And Gladys is a little liar. She told me nobody knew."

"Be quiet! You needn't say that. It was wicked of her to help Gladys in such folly. But she was sorry. Why did you bring my sister secretly to Paris?"

"What do you take me for? And what's it got to do with you, anyhow?" His eyes were provocative and his tone was insulting. "Gladys came of her own accord. I didn't kidnap the sweet child. She hasn't anything to grumble about. You talk as if we were children. Gladys knew what she was doing. She wanted her bit of fun. I was going to give her a rattling good time."

"Where is she?"

"I tell you I don't know. She got cold feet almost as soon as we got here. Kicked up a hell of a fuss. His voice had the most odious intonation Laurie had ever heard.

She had been right from the first. He was an unutterable cad. Far worse than that, he was a definitely evil personality.

She was almost insane with fear, but forced herself to speak quietly.

"Did she spend last night here?"

His eyes glinted maliciously.

"That's what you're getting at! Wanting to pry into other people's business? Well, she did not. She ran away not long after we had come back from a show and supper, and I was trying to explain to her what a good time we were going to have. She suddenly went off."

"How could you let her go away—in the night—here in Paris, where she doesn't know a soul?" asked Laurie.

This brought a leering laugh from the young man.

"Well, you are a difficult person, Mrs. Moore! You didn't want her to stay with me, did you?"

"You could have seen her to some safe place. Any man would—any brute, even, any cad. Had she any money?"

"I couldn't tell you. I hadn't thought of asking her. I have enough for the two of us. I couldn't stop her. She made such an awful scene I thought she would yell the place down and get me into trouble."

"You haven't even tried to find her today?"

"I can't say I have. I really thought when she'd had enough of sulking alone, she'd come back. When they rang up just now. I thought it was she."

"All day, and you haven't tried to find her?"

"What could I do? I didn't know where she'd gone to, or whether she had any friends or not. I met some pals and spent the day with them at the races. They've been having dinner with me. Haven't long gone. After all, Gladys isn't a baby! She knows what she's about. A chap can always tell that."

"How dare you?"

In her despair and fury, Laurie started him for a moment, with her blue eyes sending out lightnings of scorn. But he was too deeply encased in his armour of self-love and heartless self-will to feel the slightest stirring of remorse. Her contempt only roused him to further insults.

"And who are you to talk, anyhow?" he asked, with unmistakable meaning. "Why should you put on these virtuous airs just because your sister chooses to come for a trip to Paris with a chap she's fond of?"

"You've got a husband you've parted from easily enough, and everybody knows that you're Albery's girl! You play your own little game all right. You know which side your bread is buttered, too!"

"I'm not going to be bullied by a married woman who's no better than she ought to be. You can stop trying to make out your sister's a little plaster saint! And you can just clear out of here as quick as you like, or I'll have you shown out—"

He got no farther.

His face was red now; his eyes glared with all the venomous feelings that rose out of his wounded self-esteem and the failure of the little escapade he had expected to enjoy so much.

The door opened and Rex Moore came in, with a rather frightened-looking hotel servant behind him, who immediately withdrew.

Rex Moore's face was like a bronze mask. His eyes, as they fixed themselves on Jimmy Dallas' face, held the young man motionless.

But Rex stopped to speak to Laurie first.

Chapter 46

GLADY'S STORY

"You sister is downstairs," said Rex. "I've put her in charge of the woman in the dressing-room, who has taken her into a small salon, which is empty. She is very much upset. Go down to her at once."

He caught Laurie's arm, as she swayed, almost fainting in her relief.

"Steady!" he said gently. "You mustn't give way. Wait for me downstairs. I won't be long."

As she hurried out, trembling she saw Rex Moore advancing on Jimmy Dallas with murder in his eye.

Gladys was weeping quietly in the simple, unrestrained misery of a tired child. The tears rained down in a curtain. She had evidently changed her clothes before her flight the night before. She wore a light blue muslin frock and a thin crepe coat over it, and a darker blue crocheted cap on her glorious curls. The dress and coat were crumpled, and looked sorry finery.

Her whole aspect was bedraggled, like a flower that someone has broken off its stem and flung away. She had lost all her defiance; the note of gay selfishness had gone. There was no trace of sullen resistance in the exquisite tear-drenched face.

Laurie took her in her arms, thanking the dressing-room attendant and intimating that she could go. The little salon led out of a writing-room. Nobody was likely to disturb them at this late, or, rather early hour.

"Glad—Glad! My little one, don't cry!" soothed Laurie, like a mother. "You've nothing to cry about now. I've found you, darling; that's all that matters. You're quite safe with me. And Rex is here. Rex found you, Glad. He's wonderful. I'm so happy. I can think of nothing now that you're safe."

The girl cried a little more, but not for long. In the atmosphere of love and selfless devotion with which her sister had always surrounded her, she soon recovered herself. But it was a stricken soul that looked out of the grey-blue eyes.

Glad's heart had been sorely wounded, but her self-assurance had received a more crushing blow still. She had thought herself so strong, so independent. She had imagined she could have plenty of fun, and not pay for it. She had put her faith in man in the shape of Jimmy Dallas. And she had got a nasty tumble from the dizzy height of romance and adventure into the mire of crass reality.

"Laurie, I'm so wretched!" she said, in a voice hoarse from fatigue and fright. "I thought he loved me. I was crazy about him. And now you'll hate and despise me. And I loathe myself for being such a fool."

"Don't talk like that, Glad!" said Laurie. And now her level-headedness revealed itself, and she spoke in a quiet, business-like way.

"Everything is all right. I have seen Mr. Dallas, and I know that he tricked you into coming here with him, and that you went away last night because you found him out. And in some wonderful way that I don't understand Rex found you."

"Laurie, he can do something to me—I can't tell you what!" Glad confessed, shaking in a sudden paroxysm of fear and shame.

"When I'm with him, I can't even think of myself. I don't know what I'm doing. Now it seems it can't have been me who came here with him, and lied to you, and made poor Nelly so miserable, by telling her she must keep my secret."

"Never mind, darling," said Laurie. "It's all right now."

But Gladys had to unbuckle her poor little heart.

"Now I know I never believed in him at all," she repeated in a strangled voice. "I just wanted to be with him—anyhow. It was all my fault, Laurie. I led him on to think that I knew what he meant. And I thought I did."

"But—when we were back again here last night, after the show and the supper—I just knew that I had been all wrong. I didn't want just a good time. I didn't want to be with him—anyhow. I'm afraid I made a silly scene. I knew what I'd done and I went quite dotty. I think. He tried to make me stay, and I ran away."

Laurie sat with her sister's hands clasped in hers. She did not look at Glad.

"What did you do, darling?"

"I don't know. It was very late, you know. I had to get a porter to let me out of the hotel. But it wasn't dark long. I got to the river and I thought I'd throw myself in. You see, I'm crazy about Jimmy, and I didn't want to live any longer. I just didn't."

"But I was frightened and people looked at me so queerly. Oh, Laurie, there were such dreadful people wandering about by the river! I felt like I did when I was ill in Sydney. I think I must have had fever."

"But all today?" Laurie asked.

"What have you been doing?"

"Wandering about, I think. I sat in a pretty park for hours. There were lots of children playing about. They were so sweet."

"What have you had to eat?"

"Nothing. I found I'd left my bag at the hotel. I hadn't even a handkerchief!" And Gladys gave a shrill little laugh that tore her sister's heart. "I didn't want food, anyhow. I walked about the streets until it was dark. I looked in the shops. Oh Laurie, the shops are too lovely, aren't they?"

This was a touch of the real Gladys, and Laurie smiled.

Then Gladys began to cry again, from sheer weakness.

"When it was dark, I didn't know what to do," she went on. I went into a big church somewhere; there was a service going on, and such lovely music. But I felt terrible when it was over and they shut the doors."

"And in the end I thought the only thing to do was to come back to the hotel and get Jimmy to give me some money to get back to England with. I found my way somehow—I met a man who spoke English—and just before I got to it, I came across Rex Moore. He was almost immediately outside. That seemed to be the end of everything."

TO PLAY BENDERSVILLE

"Doc" Crist's Gettysburg Old Timers, who won their twentieth victory of the season over Bendersville Friday evening, will meet the same team on the playground field Tuesday evening. Next Thursday Starner's independents will be played away and on Tuesday, August 20, the Campbell's shoe company nine will be played at Littlestown. "Hen" Bream will rejoin the Old Timers after next week when he concludes his summer course at Columbia university, New York.

Crewmen of the University of California at Los Angeles travel 60 miles daily to and from practice rows.

Igor Stravinsky revised the score of "Petrouchka" last winter while in New York, making corrections and initialing them on Jose Utrab's score.

OLD TIMERS WIN ON 2 HITS, 1-0

Bendersville Bows to Locals On Friday; Only 5 Safe Blows in Game.

The Gettysburg Old Timers nosed out Bendersville, 1-0, in a snappy baseball game played at Bendersville Friday evening as part of the program at the annual Bendersville community fire company festival.

"Turney" Ecker twirled for the locals and yielded but three hits while fanning eleven men. Baumgardner also hurled airtight ball for Bendersville while striking out six men.

The only run of the game came in the second inning. With one out, T. Raff was hit by a pitched ball. He raced to third on R. Gilbert's single and then scored on Markley's long fly to Reed in center field.

Bendersville threatened to score only in the final frame. With one away, Reed tripled. Ecker tightened up and fanned Pinch Hitter Orner and Hertzog.

Today's Talk

—By George Matthew Adams—

ENCOURAGERS

FOR many years a gentleman in Pennsylvania wrote me letters very often, and always enclosed several poems that he loved. He came to see me one day and I found him a fine, lovely character who gained more pleasure writing encouraging letters to those who helped him—many whom he had never met—than from anything else. He had little money, but lived simply and kindly and was so happy in spreading encouragement.
He died several years ago but his good deeds live on.

The one dominating purpose for the writing of these talks is that they may bring cheer and encouragement to those who read them. They make no pretense to literary excellence. They are talks mostly to unseen friends, scattered far and wide. We try to make them friendly talks.

Recently I received a long letter from a gentleman in New England.
He had just lost his father who had proved a wonderful father, and he told me how much he missed him, and then he told of the simple joys of his boyhood, and of his happy family, and the innumerable incidents of his life that had enriched it. He told of the thousands of words a year which he wrote to unseen and unknown persons—just to encourage them.

Often I feel that were it not for the beautiful letters which I receive
I would not have the courage to go on writing these brief talks each day, year in and year out. But, after all, we are just a great family of friends in a big world—yet it is not big enough to allow envy, strife, bitterness and selfishness to work their unhappy ends.

I wish to thank every person who ever reads these talks and to thank all the persons who have ever had a kindly thought that they have sent my way, whether they have ever written to me or not. Just to know that I have stimulated a love for reading, for nature, and kindness, is sufficient to make me wish that these talks might be more worthy and helpful.

One feels so happy when he has rendered a happy turn to someone else. I know of no investment so sound, so sure, so permanent. If every one would express one's appreciation when kindness has been rendered one, this world would grow happier and happier. At no time in the history of the world have people so hungered for encouragement, for hope, and for understanding.

RELIEF JOB STRIKE MAY HIT WHOLE NATION

Wrangling over wages paid for works progress administration jobs reached a showdown between the government and American Federation of Labor at New York when a strike affecting 100,000 men was voted.
George Meany (upper left), president of the New York state federation of labor is shown addressing union labor delegates at a meeting where the strike was voted. However, strikers were warned by Hugh Johnson (right) and Harry Hopkins (inset, lower left), relief officials, that other workers would be called in to fill the jobs. A WPA tenement project in New York affected by the strike is shown at bottom. Labor officials predicted the strike would attain nationwide proportions. (Associated Press Photos)

Confession Forced Woman Contends

Detroit, Aug. 10 (AP).—Loretta
Jackson testified Friday that Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea "raved and swore" to make her and three other defendants confess to the slaying of Howard Carter Dickinson.

She was the last of the defendants to take the stand. Like William Lee Ferris, Florence Jackson, and Jean Miller, she repudiated each of the statements the prosecutor obtained from her and introduced in evidence.

At the end of the sixteenth day of the trial, the jury of six men (7 seven women had heard two widely divergent stories of the fatal shooting of the New York attorney in Rouge park the night of June 26.

Ferris testified that Dickinson shot himself, either accidentally or with suicidal intent. Florence Jackson said she saw Ferris stand over Dickinson and shoot him. The other women gave substantially the same testimony, but said they did not see the actual shooting. All four denied they had plotted the slaying to obtain the $134 Dickinson was carrying.

Italians Ready for 3-Power Paris Talks

Rome, Aug. 10 (AP).—Italy officially announced preparedness Friday night for a tri-power conference in Paris next week on the Italo-Ethiopian situation, but the nation, honoring seven countrymen killed in an airplane crash near Cairo as the first heroes of the country's East African program, reflected no optimism over the possible outcome.

Baron Pompeo Aloisi, head of the Italian delegation during recent negotiations, at Geneva, was chosen to lead Italy's representatives at the talks in Paris with British and French diplomats.

An impression was widely prevalent here, however, that the new conversations would prove no more conclusive than those at Geneva.

MAYOR LAGUARDIA TRIES HAND AT WRITING POETRY

New York, Aug. 10 (AP).—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia, aviator, orator and statesman, entered the lists of poetry Friday.

Appearing in The Subway Sun, the Interborough Rapid Transit company's poster "publication," was, over the mayor's signature, this contribution to the police department's campaign against traffic accidents. Watch them dodging here and there. Taking neither thought nor care; My! You see some tragic sights. When they cross against the lights.

Show Is Closed By Cattle Sale

Purebred Holstein bulls brought higher bids than Guernsey bulls at the consignment sale held Friday afternoon as the closing event for the tenth annual Cumberland county dairy cattle show at Mountain View park, near Mt. Holly Springs. Eighteen young bulls were placed on the auction block.

The highest bid was $160 brought by an 11-months-old Holstein bull consigned by Arthur G. Wingert, of Mechanicsburg, R. 5, which was purchased by J. Norton Kruger, Carlisle dairyman. Wingert's herd produced the animal selected for this year's grand champion Holstein bull, also.

The Guernsey bull selected as a junior champion, consigned by Miss Mary B. McCullough, of Newville, R. 1, brought the highest bid for that breed, when it was sold for $70 to Charles E. Harman, of Barnitz.

SUCCEEDS IN SUICIDE AFTER FIFTY ATTEMPTS

Worcester, Mass., Aug. 10 (AP).—Mrs. Mary A. Parker, 59, of Water-town, who had tried to commit suicide more than fifty times during the past month, succeeded Friday when she hanged herself in a bathroom at the state hospital by removing a slip and using it as a noose.

She had been a patient in the hospital since July 25, and had tried suicide two or three times a day since her arrival there.

200,000 CCC Jobs Going A-Begging

Washington, Aug. 10 (AP).—Civilian Conservation Corps jobs have gone a-begging and knocked the recruiting program month off schedule.

Official circles Friday disclosed difficulty in enlisting 328,000 men to bring the corps up to the 600,000 enrollment contemplated by President Roosevelt when he mapped his new relief program.

The full 600,000 figure is not expected by officials to be reached until the cold months of January or February set unemployed to trekking to the forest camps.

Checking up on the recruiting delay, which has resulted in only 135,260 enlistments up to August 3 United States employment service officials said reports from state headquarters showed a corps of 500,000 was the probable maximum obtainable at the end of the enlistment quota on August 31.

Being beautiful means jobs for many New York girls who pose for advertisements.

COUNTIES LOSE $20,000

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 10.—Liquor control board statistics showed Friday that the 67 counties will be deprived about $200,000 in revenue as a result of the new beer law. The law provides that the licensing of beer distributors pass from the county treasurers to the board. Ben G. Helsel, acting secretary of the board, said about 2,000 distributors were licensed last year. They paid $100 each.

1,330 WPA Projects To Employ 107,000

Harrisburg, Aug. 10 (AP).—Edward N. Jones, works progress administrator, said today 1,330 projects which would employ 107,000 workers have been approved and sent to Washington for federal endorsement.

The projects involve a federal expenditure of $40,901,000. He said President Roosevelt has approved 260 projects for Pennsylvania to give jobs to 15,614 persons at a federal outlay of $2,527,000.

Sponsors have submitted 1,769 projects involving the employment of 127,335 persons at a federal outlay of $46,955,000. This includes the jobs approved by the President and those forwarded to Washington.

Stonesifer. The new men will be eligible to play today.

DETROIT WIVES PICKET PACKERS IN MEAT STRIKE

Carrying their campaign for a 20 per cent reduction in meat prices direct to the packers, Detroit housewives are shown as they staged a mass picketing demonstration at local packing plants. Owners Ask Test Of Water Supply

Fifty to sixty requests for examination of individual springs and wells in the rural sections daily are being received by the state health department's bureau of engineering, according to Dr. Edith MacBride-Dexter, secretary of health.

"It is gratifying to know that through the department's educational efforts, as well as the co-operative spirit of owners of individual supplies in rural sections, a large measure of protection against typhoid fever is being created around the private water supply in country districts," the secretary of health said today.

"The protection consists of an examination by field officers of the physical condition of the well or spring and its location, with particular reference to possible surface or underground pollution. In addition, samples of the supply are forwarded to the Philadelphia laboratories for examination as to its quality and safety for use as drinking water."

"While for many years the department of health has supervised the public water supplies, co-operative with local city officials in this activity, the intensive drive against rural typhoid fever, is emanating from the private water supply, had its real beginning only in 1926. This work eventually will reduce the typhoid fever rate."

Kansas City (AP).—Never on fairway or green, Millard Dietz carded a birdie 3 on the twelfth hole at Blue Hills club here—and found 3 balls at the same time.

His tee shot hooked into rough, where the first ball was found. His second was over the green, leading Dietz to two more lost balls. He holed a niblick shot then to beat par.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

By GEORGE TUCKER

New York—Why do celebrities think they can disguise themselves by wearing dark glasses, peculiar looking caps, and other items of apparel that always focus attention upon them? Don't ask me. I got into the elevator this morning at 11:30 to go down for a quick pot of coffee and a tall young man so strange in appearance got in with me that I looked up.

It was Colonel Lindbergh. The flier wore glasses so large that they looked like stove lids, and a great, fuzzy cap so odd in appearance that had I passed it on the street, no matter who happened to be wearing it, I'd have paused to stare.

The Colonel held a leather brief case and looked straight ahead. Although it was raining, he wore no top or raincoat, merely the usual grey business suit. He popped hurriedly out into the rain. At every step people paused to stare. He could not have advertised his identity more thoroughly had he worn a sign on his back.

The colonel's presence in out part of town probably is to be explained by the fact that on the floor directly beneath are located the offices of Harcourt, Brace, the publishers. They're bringing out a book by Mrs.

Meeting the Colonel thus recalls that morning last winter I bumped into another celebrity—and almost got crowned for my trouble. It was raining and I stepped from Grand Central station to the running-board of a cab. But I didn't have a chance to enter. Two strong-armed huskies grabbed me by the shoulders and hauled me back. "Get along," was the terse command! Dancing with rage I started to yell for a cop when it became obvious that the cab already had a passenger. Probably you'll remember the name. It was Ex-President Herbert Hoover.

DRIVER FINED — DIDN'T

THINK HE NEEDED ONE

Baltimore, Aug. 10.—After testifying that he had been driving 14 years without a license and didn't think he needed one, a negro in traffic court Friday was fined $50 and costs.

Magistrate William F. Laukaitis, who imposed the fine, stated he intended, if he could, to break up the practice of driving without licenses.

The negro, John H. Davis, of the 1600 block Riggs avenue, was arrested after he ran into a building at Calvert and Saratoga streets. He elected to serve his time in jail in lieu of paying the fine.

HEAT KILLS 9 IN MIDWEST

Parched States Find Some Relief in Scattered Areas
Today; Mercury Rises.

(By Associated Press)
Parched middle America found relief in scattered areas today after intense and widespread suffering.

Nine lay dead from the heat. Five of them were Negro convicts who succumbed in Angola, Louisiana, prison hay field, where it was 104 in the shade.

Two persons, one of them J. T. Leonard, 87-year-old Gainesville publisher, died in Texas.

Two Californians died as Los Angeles broiled in intense sunshine.

While temperatures rose to new highs in many Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas points, areas to the north felt the cool touch of wind-borne rains.

At least five persons were injured in sudden storms in Iowa that brought temperatures down from the state's seasonal high, 106 degrees, to the eighties.

A tri-state fair band at Burlington tried to play to quiet a frightened throng but had to give up when the wind blew the sheet music away.

More rains and cooling breezes were expected in various portions of the middle west today.

From the Pacific coast eastward the nation felt scorching sun rays Friday. It was 98 at Los Angeles. San Bernardino, inland, reported 107 degrees and several points had 106 degrees maximum.

Spokane had 95 and from scattered points in the northwest came reports of minor forest fires. It was 102 in Boise, Idaho; 88 at Denver and 92 at Albuquerque, New Mexico.

Improving economic conditions in Argentina are being reflected in an increased demand for household electric appliances.

A speaker at the recent meeting of the International Association of Police Chiefs declared that small men make better policemen.

What Does Advertising Cost?

It is commonly known that many business firms spend large sums to advertise their products. Perhaps it is only natural that some people should conclude that we have to pay considerably more for most articles because of the money spent in advertising them.

What would be your guess, for instance, as to the cost of advertising a package of cigarettes? That is one of the most heavily advertised articles. You see cigarette advertising in nearly every newspaper and magazine and you hear it every day on the radio. Many believe that a good part of the price of a package of cigarettes must go to pay for the advertising.

It may be surprising then, to learn that all the advertising of well-known brands of cigarettes actually costs less than one cent per package. Isn't that cheap, when you consider that this is about all the selling expense these manufacturers have?

Most other articles carry a much smaller percentage of advertising expense. Take canned foods, for instance. For the average can of fruit or vegetables, only about a quarter of a cent has been spent for advertising.

With many larger articles the advertising cost is even less in proportion to their price. While the rapid spread of automobiles, oil burners, and refrigerators has largely been due to advertising, yet the advertising cost is very small for each article.

The commission paid to the salesman is more or less taken for granted, since it is easy to see that his services are necessary in selling these conveniences. Advertising, which costs far less, performs a service just as important and helps to make the salesman's work more useful. It stirs your interest in a new article and gives you advance information about it. It makes it easier for you to buy and easier for the salesman to sell.

Every manufacturer and every merchant knows that there are many ways by which to sell his goods. No one is required to advertise. Those who choose to do so, advertise because they have found that this is an economical way to do business. When the merchandise has merit and the advertising is truthful, the public benefits from this service and the advertiser is rewarded. The use of good advertising reduces his total operating costs.

For the reason, advertising does not add to the cost of goods you may buy. In fact, the prices of many common articles have been reduced tremendously because of the savings resulting from the use of advertising. The increased sales volume often brings lower costs in manufacture as well as in selling.

The money spent for advertising is nothing for us as consumers to worry about. The cost of advertising the average article represents so small a part of its selling price that we could almost disregard it. But it is an important factor to business as it cuts down many other costs and increases efficiency. Advertising saves us money on most of the things we buy.

LONE BOY SCOUT ON

SITE OF JAMBOREE

Washington, Aug. 10 (AP). — A single boy scout wandered Friday through the vast camp set up to house the world scout jamboree which President Roosevelt called off Thursday.

He was Alfred Hoffner, Jr., 15, of Springfield, Pa.

Alford hitch-hiked to the capital before the President decided to cancel the jamboree because of the prevalence of infantile paralysis in this section.

He has been working as a water boy in camp and plans to stay until it is dismantled. By that time he probably will earn enough money to buy a ride home.
